

Will the Real Useful Idiot Please Stand Up?

February 23,2014

Dear Mr. Repair Man Jack,

As I read this article and see your Facebook link in the left margin, I truly don't know whether to laugh or cry. I am now convinced that the greater danger to America is not liberalism, but instead, what I call 'conservative hypocrisy'. Are you folks at Red State really that clueless, or simply unconcerned about your apparent double standard? Hopefully, it's the former.

If, Mr. Jack, as you said, Zuckerberg owns the House Speaker, then he owns also many other Republicans, along with conservative bloggers and talk radio hosts. To put it bluntly, Zuckerberg owns all of you with a Facebook page! Think about it--where does Zuckerberg get his millions to fund his efforts for illegal immigration reform and the rest of his liberal agenda? -- from his Facebook subscribers of course. Every time someone subscribes and visits the Facebook page of a conservative--and I include them all-- Palin, Paul, Cruz, Coulter, Malkin, Erickson, etc.-- I can just hear the advertising revenue 'cha-ching' in Zuckerberg's pockets. I'd bet that Facebook conservative pundits have funded at least 50% of Zuckerberg's illegal alien amnesty campaign. (I closed my Facebook account within hours of learning about Zuckerberg's sponsorship). And so you gentlemen at Red State, for all your columns written and words spoken to expose the left, as far as I'm concerned they mean absolutely nothing if you turn around and so willingly give your money to the same evil individuals you claim to abhor.

And the same goes for those pundits on national talk radio--Beck, Hannity, Levin, Limbaugh --(one of them telling us for many years his mission is to defeat liberalism, and that we should always 'follow the money' when exposing liberals. Oh, the irony!) - these hosts who personally endorse such sponsors as Carbonite, Stamps.com, AOL, Sleep Number Bed, Legal Zoom, Proflowers -- sponsors whose far-left CEO's give millions of dollars not only to Democratic politicians, but extreme left groups such as ACTBLUE and Move-on.org. No hypocrisy there, I suppose!

On a much larger scale, 'conservative hypocrisy' is practiced also by so-called 'Christian corporations', such as Chick-fil-a and Gordon Food Service--companies who tell us they support Biblical principals, such as traditional marriage, but then give (many times by pressuring their employees), thousands of dollars to the United Way. United Way --the biggest funder of Planned Parenthood outside the federal government!

And so sir, I believe the question I asked for the first time only four short years ago-- 'what happens when good people are outnumbered by the bad?' -- has already been answered. The answer of course, is that America, as a virtuous country, is finished. There are too few truly righteous left to save our "one nation under God". And the so-called 'main stream conservatives' can never win the war against liberalism. They don't have the commitment or the passion for conservatism that the liberals have for liberalism. But even worse, they are much too content helping the enemy!
